Glasgow workers to scale peaks for charity

MORE than 20 Glasgow workers are joining the legendary Three Peaks Challenge this weekend in a bid to raise funds for Marie Curie Cancer Care.

The 23 staff from Thales UK, the nation's second-largest defence company, are aiming to climb the three highest mountains in England, Scotland, and Wales respectively in less than 24 hours.

The teams' challenge will begin at the foot of Ben Nevis on Saturday afternoon. After completing their first climb and being driven 248 miles to the Lake District they will negotiate Scatell Pike, then travel onwards to Wales to begin their ascent to the summit of Snowdon.

Alisdair Sim, captain of Glasgow Hampions, one of three teams representing the city, said: "The support in Glasgow for this event has been overwhelming."

"I'd say that most of us are pretty well prepared, but it's still going to be a tough challenge."
